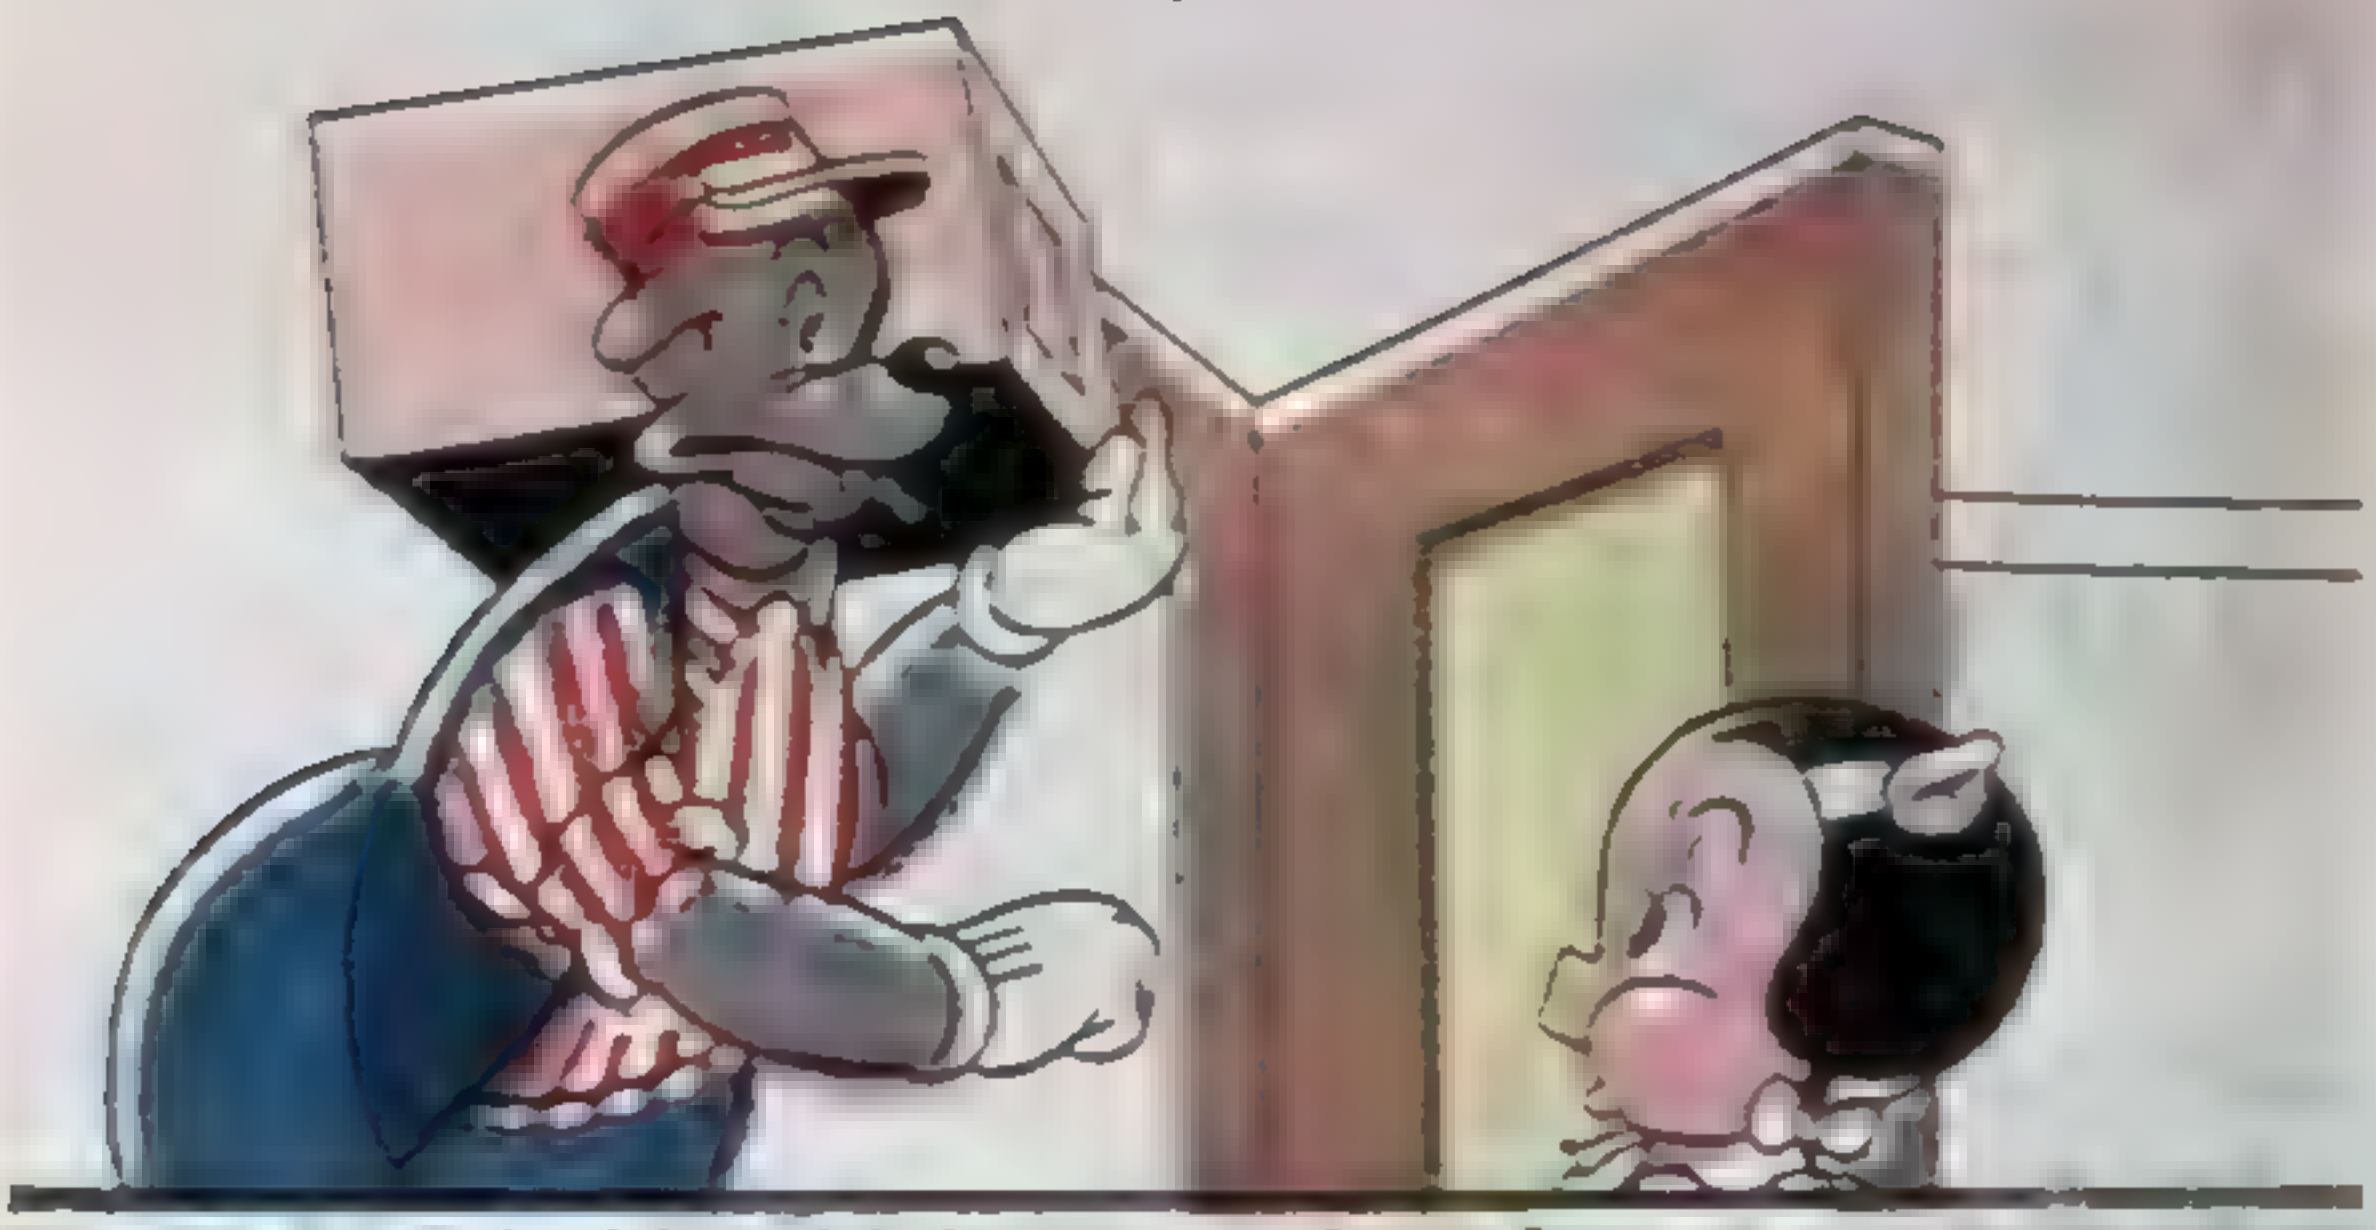
Petunia's present



ne and Porky pulled and dragged the box into the house. "It was my last cent."

"Move over," Porky said. Petunia moved.

"Now we can't get into the mansion," Porky said sadly.

"Oh, I can't tell you how much I appreciate your saving me your money," Petunia said, grabbing "Wuppo as can all have the pennies, whatever it is."

The hungry animals crowded around Bugs and looked over the box's lid. Bugs held the box open and they looked at the very puzzled expressions on their faces.

Porky was the first to speak. "Ain't this a fine kettle of fishcakes," he exclaimed.

Quickly Bugs ran back into the box and grabbed one of the pennies. He read the label in a loud voice. "Dreme Dreker's Caeme Oil."

Anxiously they looked at the other bottles in the box.

"Let us all caeme on!" Bugs yelled in his best "Cab" voice. "Let us be thin." Without another word, Porky and Petunia began to caeme on.

"It was a mean trick," she added. "And we've spent all our money to get so fat."

"Never mind, Petunia," Porky said, trying to console her. "We can go to a mean new Salvador F. Fudge III."

"Forget it, mermit!" Bugs exclaimed. "Don't sell it!"
